Don't you think it might be □ □presumptuous for the □ □faithful □ to pretend to correct the Pope □?

It is a good question. If "for God judges everyone by the same standard (Rm 2.11)" shouldn't we not imitate him? And this, lever, lespecially since win case of imminent peril to the faith, inferiors must publicly correct their superiors. That is the reason why Saint Paul, who was inferior to saint Peter, publicly corrected him, because there was a danger of scandal as far as the faith was concerned. And it is said in saint Augustin's gloss (ex Epist. 191) of this passage: saint Peter taught by his example to those of the front rank, that, if they happened to veer off the right path, they should not be embarrassed to be corrected by those below them (Saint Thomas d'Aquinas Theological Sum, 11-11) Q.
